《实用英语》是一套供高职高专院校使用的系列教材。

自1995年正式出版以来，它所坚持的内容实用性、教学的针对性和编写的科学性受到了使用者的欢迎，它是国内最早专为高职高专英语教学编写的教材之一。

自第一版以来，它曾前后被列为“面向21世纪课程教材”、“教育部高职高专规划教材”、“普通高等教育‘九五’教育部重点教材”，并获得全国普通高等学校优秀教材一等奖，第四版被列为“普通高等教育‘十一五’国家级规划教材”。

本教材在编写过程中注意吸收现代外语教学理论中适合我国英语教学实际的某些观点，又采纳传统外语教学理论中某些合理部分，结合我国外语教学中行之有效的理论和方法以及我国高职高专英语教学的现状，力求正确处理好打好语言基础和语言应用的关系，突出加强英语实践能力的培养和实际运用，并注意结合学生毕业后实际工作的需要，将语言基础能力与实际涉外交际能力的培育有机结合。

修订后的《综合训练与自测》保留了部分《综合训练与自测》（第三版）的内容，合编了《泛读教程》（第三版）的部分内容，并加编了相关练习和答案。

章节摘录

In the near future, the smart survivors will set up newsrooms around local news. They will deliver that news to your computer, or to your phone, or whatever tool you prefer. The good newsroom will prepare in-depth reports if you want to find more information about the subject. As a subscriber, you will be able to customize your areas of interest. I am already doing that with the sidebar on my computers, which provide a regular news feed related to my favorite topics. But I also want to know what else is going on. For example, BJ is closing here in Greenville (today). That was news I could use. The newsroom will get that information for us. I will happily pay a subscription rate to get that information, because I do not have time to gather it myself. Even though I myself have a huge network, I cannot be on top of everything all the time. A good newsroom would do the work for me.

Now, the question is what about advertising. Newspapers make their money from ads, not subscribers. In this case, will people prefer to pay more to get local news or will they subject themselves to ads?

I think the answer can be found with Google. Google provides information we are looking for, but delivers it free because advertisers can target the search "readers". Newsrooms could do the same. Rather than mass advertising, advertisers could target their ads to readers of certain news reports, or certain types of subscribers. As long as I was not bombarded, and it was done tastefully, I would not mind. In fact, I would appreciate it, because I might find a product or service that I would like to explore further. In conclusion, print newspapers will soon disappear. They will be replaced by local newsrooms that have reporters "on the ground" collecting useful news and quickly distributing that information. It will be paid for through targeted advertisers who "sponsor" the ads delivery to you. It will be done respectfully and professionally. It will be a pleasant experience for you, the reporter and the advertiser.
