章节摘录

When she was nineteen months old, an illness left Helen deaf, blind, and mute~ She could not hear, nor see, nor speak, so her mother sent for a special teacher. The teacher, young Anne Sullivan, managed to break through to communicate with Helen. Then Helen learned to associate objects with words, to read raised words on cardboards, and she slowly got the ability to speak. Indeed, she was able to lip-read by placing her finger on the throat of the speaker in question. What a clever girl she was !

She began to write about her life, first in articles for magazines and later in several books. One of them is The Story of My Life. Her remarkable achievements in reading, writing and even speaking soon made her internationally famous. Helen's own idea to life can be summed up by her advice to a five-year-old blind child in 1932: "Never bend your head. Always hold it high. Look the world straight in the face." How brave Helen was !
