内容概要

The Ningxia Hui Autonomous Region is situated in the northwest of China. The Yellow River, running across nearly 400km in the region, supplies 4 billion cubic meters of water annually for irrigation. Ningxia since ancient times has been famed for its rich natural and cultural resources endowed by the Yellow River. Ningxia is one of the five provincial-level autonomous regions in China. Thirty-five percent of its population of 5.87 million is of the Hui Ethnic Group. In the region, there are mysterious mausoleums of the kings of Western Xia, the cliff paintings of Helan Mountains, the Shuidonggou historical ruins, the ancient Great Wall and other historical sights and places of interest, which all witnessed the long history of Ningxia. The book mainly presents the customs of the Hui Ethnic Group. Besides, it also introduces Ningxia's past and present to the readers.

章节摘录

版权页：The Ningxia Hui Autonomous Region is the largest area in China where the Hui people live in compact communities. The forerunners of the Huis appeared on this land over 1,000 years ago. Relying on the rich water resources from the Yellow River and their hard work, the Hui people have flourished and turned this alluvial plain, hemmed in on three sides by deserts, into a livable "home of rice and fish".
