章节摘录

版权页：插图： People often ask me for suggestions about how to learn English. Everyone is different. I'll share some of my experience. I once took one semester of second-year English in Peking University, but I mostly learned English on my own. One thing I can tell is that, once you've started learning, you should try to think in English as much as you can. When you're riding your bike or walking down the street, just think about "how would I say them in English?"

" At first, it will be with simple words or phrases, but later you should be thinking about bigger phrases and sentences. Now when I'm in America, for most time, I just think in English and speak it directly. It's amazing how much this helps. For several years after I started learning, I was often afraid of trying to speak English with others because I didn't want to make mis-takes. Finally I got it over. And while traveling in America, I'd try to hang out with friends who spoke no Chinese, so I'd have no choice but to speak English. And I decided that if I said something stupid and other people laughed at me, so be it. My English started improving more quickly after that. It may be a good idea to ask any of your American friends to look at the way you're writing, and give you some suggestions for improvement. 1. Where does the author probably come from ?

A. England. B. America. C. China. D. Canada. 2. Where is the author now ?

A. In China. B. In America. C. In England. D. In Canada. 3. Which of the following is NOT true according to the passage ?

A. The author thinks his methods are suitable for all English learners. B. The author always thought in English when he began to learn English. C. The author didn't want others to laugh at his mistakes in the past. D. The author thinks in English and speaks it directly now. 4. Now, when others laugh at the author's mistakes, what will he do ?

A. Keep away from them. B. Argue with them. C. Ask them the reason. D. Let it go. 5. Which of the following can't help you improve your English according to the passage ?

A. Thinking in English as much as you can. B. Trying to speak English with others. C. Asking your American friends to look at the way you're writing, and give you some suggestions for improvement. D. Often going abroad.
