章节摘录

The Internet is a way of life for US college students , with research showing them to be one of the most connected demographic groups . A recent study by Harris Interactive and 360 Youth revealed that 93 percent of American college students access the Internet , and this market is expected to grow from 15 . 2 million in 2002 to 16 . 4 million in 2007 . That is slow but it could be attributed to the already high number of college Internet users . A huge 88 percent of American college students own a computer , and more than half (56 percent) have broadband connections . Furthermore , 67 percent own cell phones and 36 percent use their mobile devices to access the Internet . Study findings are that 42 percent go online mainly to communicate socially , and 72 percent of college students check emails at least once a day , with 66 percent using at least two email addresses . The most popular online social activity is forwarding messages to friends or family , with 37 percent of college students saying they do so . The study also looked beyond the Internet surfing habits and into the buying habits of this group , and found them responsible for more than US $210 billion in sales last year alone . College students have learned how to spend their money , with 93 percent saying low prices were important when shopping . The study also showed that 65 percent make loan payments ; 41 percent of freshmen have a credit card ; and 79 percent of seniors have a credit card . A significant number of charges on those credit cards are likely to be for entertainment and leisure expense .
