章节摘录

All through my boyhood and youth , I was known and pointed out for the pattern of an idler; and yet I was always busy on my own private end , which was to learn to write. I kept always two books in my pocket , one to read , one to write in. As I walked , my mind was busy fitting what I saw with appropriate words; when I sat by the roadside , I would either read , or a pencil and a penny version-book would be in my hand , to note down the features of the scene or commemorate some halting stanzas. Thus I lived with words. And what I thus wrote was for no ulterior use; it was written consciously for practice. It was not so much that I wished to be an author ( though I wished that too ) as that I had vowed that I would learn to write. That was a proficiency that tempted me; and I practised to acquire it , as men learn to whittle , in a wager with myself. Description was the principal field of my exercise; for to any one with senses there is always something worth describing , and town and country are but one continuous subject. But I worked in other ways also; often accompanied my walks with dramatic dialogues , in which I played many parts; and often exercised myself in writing down conversations from memory.
