内容概要

托福是世界上最广为认可的英语测试。

110个国家的逾6000所大专院校认可托福分数，其中包括美国所有4300所高等院校和众多来自英国、欧洲的世界顶尖高等院校。

新托福无论从考试形式还是从考试内容等方面都突破了以往的传统考试。

这也对中国学生的英语能力提出了更高更全面的要求，一向擅长语法、词汇和阅读的中国学生开始要面临更加严峻的听说能力的考验。

许多考生感到拿新托福高分的困难，便把它称之为“变态”考试。

尤其“变态”的地方就是新增设口语部分的“人机对话”形式。

很多考生由于口语的单项成绩不理想而徘徊在“复议”和“二战”的边缘。

另外，口语具有严格的时间限制，这就对我们中国同学提出了更高的要求。

那么我们如何攻克这一门考试呢?一定要从真题入手，熟悉考试的规律和答题思路，才可能拿到相对满意的分数，同时这也将使中国同学的口语水平在全球范围内有一个很好的提升。

章节摘录

Some time ago I created a blog—a free publishing tool for easily expressing myself and sharing my thoughts with the world. I used to keep myself passive just by searching things on the Internet, but now I can use it to serve myself and help others as well. By providing tips on how to learn English well, I create a connection with an audience, nurture that relationship with comments and likes and keep the dialogue flowing. This is rather different from the in-person instructions or instant messenger. Also, I can position myself as an expert, build online brand and manage reputation, which definitely boosts my confidence to succeed in life. Fortunately enough, I learn a lot more and even make friends with some of them. So I thought I would go ahead and share with them more useful thoughts on the subject. In my opinion, it's the family, not the friends, that has the most important influence on young adults. To start with, they establish right values by giving right guidance and good advice. Correct values have great effect on the way young adults look at the world and do things. Furthermore, they are very important in helping them choose the right path for their future. If the family guides young adults to the right path, they could grow up as an essential member of society. In addition, not all young adults could make a right decision for their own course. If the family has wider experience and broader knowledge, they could make a better decision. That's why I think family has the most influence on young adults. In the reading material, the university is considering requiring students to take an internship in a company because students can learn leadership and organizing skills through this experience and can get a job security more easily after graduation. In the listening material, we clearly learn that woman doesn't like the idea. One reason she gives is that students can only do some basic works such as filing or typing; they can not learn leadership or organizing skills. Another reason is based on the fact that there are a lot of students and almost all the universities require them to take an internship, so eventually there will be not enough positions for everyone. Therefore, she disagrees with that opinion. The reading passage explains the definition of establishing shot. It states that it is a kind of technique that allows cameramen film in a relatively far spot. And it has several advantages: it allows audiences to have a whole picture of the background setting; it provides audience with the mood and the feeling of the movie. In the listening passage, the professor gives an example to illustrate this. Once he went to a movie, the first sight he caught is a modern city with a lot of skyscrapers, but the cars and everything seems old-fashioned. The background seems a little bit dark, gloomy and mysterious. From this experience, he concluded that the story must have happened in a big city in the 1940s, and it's a mysterious story. By these means, he proves that establishing shot is very important. In film and television, an establishing shot sets up, or "establishes", a scene's setting and/or its participants. Typically it is a shot at the beginning (or, occasionally, end) of a scene indicating where, and sometimes when, the remainder of the scene takes place. An establishing shot may also establish a concept, rather than a location. For example, opening with a martial arts drill visually establishes the theme of martial arts. In the conversation, the woman is living in a run-down apartment, where the water pipe broke down. She can't get water and has no place to live in since it can be fixed until two weeks later. The man offers her two possible solutions. One of the solutions he comes up with is to live in her friend's house and sleep on their couch for a couple of weeks. The other solution is to stay in a cheap hotel near the school. I tend to agree with the second solution because it's inconvenient and uncomfortable to live in her friend's house. Also, it's too crowded to live with other four people. If she stayed in a hotel, she would feel easy and relaxed. Even though she needs to pay for it, it's worth it since she has to stay for two weeks after all.
