章节摘录

版权页：插图：As a result of the repeated increases to the deposit reserve ratio by the People's Bank of China (PBOC) and the rigid requirement on deposit-loan ratios by regulatory authorities, competition in the deposit market tends to be more intensive and liability management has become the primary problem in the operations of Chinese banks. More than 80% of bankers have responded that in 2011, the biggest challenge for banks is the “ increasing pressure for deposit-taking ”. Banks have taken various measures in response to meet the challenge of increased pressures on deposits, including vigorous developments in the wealth management business, expansion of the savings business through cross selling to both corporate and consumer clients, provision of value-added services and increases in marketing efforts. As the survey shows, 88.5% of the bankers indicate that they will increase their competitiveness in deposit business through "deposit and wealth management product innovation".
