章节摘录

A : Here we are on the Great Wall. B : It looks really great. The wall is high and looks solid. What's the structure of the wall ?

A : The structure of the wall consists of huge bar-stones and bricks. The inside of the wall has been formed by tamping earth and small stones , which makes the wall very firm and strong. B : How wide is it and what are the holes on the wall ?

A : Internally , the wall is about six meters (20 feet) wide , which would allow horses to gallop five abreast. A number of small holes have been drilled on the wall to allow archers to shoot arrows. There is also a barrel-drain and a moat both inside and outside the wall. In a word , military fortification has been paramount in every wall detail. B :

Oh , yes , it is really safe to defend the intrusion on the Great Wall. But what are those towers on the Wall ?

A : Those are signal fire platforms. They were an important part of the whole fortification of ancient China. They were used to send warning signals. Since the Ming Dynasty , the amount of smoke and gunfire released conveyed specific military information about the enemy. One release of smoke with one shot of gunfire signified 100 enemies ; two smoke releases with two shots of gunfire meant 500 enemies ; three smoke releases with three shots of gunfire indicated more than 1 000 enemies. Once one signal platform fired a beacon , the others would follow likewise so as to make the soldiers alert to the strength of the enemy. B : Oh , that is really interesting. Let's quicken our steps. A : OK. ……
