章节摘录

What is truth ?
