内容概要

《全国英语等级考试历年真题及专家精析（第4级）》共三个部分、包括了第一部分 笔试历年真题；第二部分、全真预测试题；第三部分、口试部分。

外语学习是一个日积月累的过程，需要经过长时期的努力，脚踏实地的学习态度才能获得预期的成效。

我们不时会听到一些读者朋友抱怨说，外语学习投入大，收效少。从小学到中学，乃至到大学，少则七、八年，多则十几年，总共花了上千学时，为什么总是成效不大，难以取得满意的考试成绩？

答案因人而异。

有的入学得多，但真正掌握的少；有的学得死，灵活性不够；还有的人学外语只是为了应付考试，一旦侥幸过关，刚学到手的一点皮毛知识就抛到了九霄云外。

章节摘录

With a new Congress drawing near, Democrats and Republicans are busily designing competing economic stimulus packages. The Republicans are sure to offer tax cuts, the Democrats——among other things——financial relief for the states. There is one measure, however, that would provide not only an immediate boost to the economy but also immediate relief to those most in need. a carefully crafted extension of the federal unemployment insurance program. The Senate approved such an extension before it adjourned in November. The House of Representatives refused to go along. It was among the greatest failures of the 107th Congress. One consequence is that jobless benefits for an estimated 780000 Americans will abruptly stop tomorrow, even though most recipients have not yet exhausted their benefits. President Bush failed to show any leadership on this matter during the November Congress. Later, he finally asked Congress to extend the program for these workers and to make the benefit effective from Dec. 28. That's not enough. The way unemployment insurance typically works is that states provide laidoff workers with 26 weeks of benefits, followed by 13 weeks of federal aid. Under Mr. Bush's scheme, federal benefits would be extended only for those who were already receiving them on Dec. 28. The extension would not cover the jobless workers who will exhaust their regular state-funded benefits after Dec. 28 an estimated 95,000 every week——but will receive no federal help unless the program is re-authorized. By the end of March, 1.2 million workers could fall into this category. The Senate saw this problem coming, and under the leadership of Hillary Rodham Clinton for New York and Don Nickles of Oklahoma, passed a bill that would not only have covered people already enrolled in the federal program but provided 13 weeks of assistance for those losing their state benefits in the new year. The House, for largely trivial reasons, refused to go along.
