章节摘录

版权页：插图：We will formulate a national master strategy for adapting to climate change, and strengthen scientific research, observations, and impact assessments on climate change. We will fully consider climate change in the course of distributing the productive forces and designing, planning and developing infrastructure and major projects. We will strengthen our ability to adapt to climate change and especially to respond to extreme weather events, accelerate the development and dissemination of adaptive technologies, and improve the ability of key sectors such as agriculture, forestry, and water resources as well as coastal and ecologically fragile areas to adapt to climate change. We will improve monitoring and early warning of, and precautions against extreme weather and climate events, and improve our ability to defend against and mitigate natural disasters.
