章节摘录

As soon as the bell rang on the last day of school , most kids could think of their long summer vacation , but nine-year-old Erica Burch had other plans. She was going to keep on learning. “ Ill be going to the MetLife Center every day to play a game on the computer , to work on math problems in the book my teacher gave me , and to do research on archaeology (考古学) .said Burch. “ Im going to be an archaeologist when I grow up , you know , and have to work hard to get ready. ” Burch lives in one of the poor neighborhoods in Tampa. She is the kind of kid Boys & Girls Clubs around America want to help. “ Our job is to help all young people , especially those from poor areas , to realize their full potential (潜能) , ” says Roxanne Spillet , president of the Boys & Girls Clubs of America. “ MetLife Learning Centers around the country were started to help kids like Erica achieve their goals. ” The Centers offer kids computers , arts and crafts , a game room , special programs and a gym. They also offer kids a safe place to hang out all year long. The money for such centers comes from the MetLife Foundation , and it was started in 1976 by MetLife Insurance. Now MetLife Learning Centers are open in many cities around the world.
