版权页：插图：5. The best answer is C. It offers the clearest, most concise wording for this sentence. "Everything depended on the tides," is a precise, clear statement that avoids unnecessary or confusing words. The best answer is NOT: A because the meaning of the statement "Everything was subservient to the disposal of the tides" is not clear. In particular, the use of the phrase "the disposal of the tides" makes no sense in the context of the sentence. B because the statement "Everything was defenseless in the face of the tides" is convoluted and wordy. In addition, the meaning is unclear. D because it creates an unclear statement: "Everything trusted in the tides." The word Everything refers back to the household schedule. It makes no sense to say that the household schedule has the ability to trust. 6. The best answer is G. This is the best introductory sentence because the rest of this new paragraph explains how "the phases of the moon" affected a "complete cycle of tides." The other choices do not logically lead into this explanation of what causes high and low tides. The best answer is NOT: F because this new paragraph is about the relationship between the moon and the tides. The rest of the paragraph does not further develop the point that the narrator had respect for her mother, as this choice suggests. H Although this choice does mention the relationship between the moon and the tides (the main topic of the new paragraph), it is a poor transition from the preceding paragraph, which concludes with a description of the mother on the bridge at high tide.
