内容概要

In the present book, the ancient classics refer first to ancient Chinese medical works, and second to ancient Buddhist scriptures. He includes both of them in his book just because he has conducted his study of Buddhist scriptures in the light of medicine, especially from the perspective of modern brain science, modern psychology and other disciplines. He inherits ancient Chinese theory of jing luo (channels and collaterals) and ancient Buddhism without being limited by them, and makes new findings without leaving classic principles.
