章节摘录

The scientific name of the American grizzly bear is Ursus horribilis. Horribilis is the right word to describe this bear. The grizzly is a fearsome beast. The strongest and most cunning grizzly that ever lived roamed the Rocky Mountains in the late 1800s. He weighed nearly two tons. And he was seven feet long from tip of nose to tip of tail. This giant bear was called Old Clubfoot. He earned his name when he lost three claws from one paw in an escape from a bear trap. After that, he was never caught by a trap again. Hundreds of hunters tried to kill Old Clubfoot. But for nearly thirty years he roamed free. He feared nothing. It is said that Old Clubfoot killed whole pens of sheep. He crushed horses' spines with his strong jaws. What Old Clubfoot could not kill, he would outwit. Again and again he escaped from groups of skilled hunters. Once he led seven hunters through snow-covered mountains for more than a week. Then he left his pursuers behind. They found they were more than 150 miles from home. Once a hunter made what he thought was a foolproof bear trap. He fastened a heavy rifle to a tree. Then he hung a piece of raw meat from a cord tied to the trigger. The hunter was sure that Old Clubfoot would tug at the bait. Then the rifle would fire and kill him. But Old Clubfoot proved his cunning once more. He came up from behind and pushed aside the muzzle of the rifle. Then he took the bait. The rifle fired into the air instead of at the bear. Many men have told stories of Old Clubfoot's courage. A shepherd once watched from the safety of a hillside as the bear stalked a herd of cattle in a meadow below. He saw Old Clubfoot choose a calf and fell it with one blow. The calf's mother tried to rake Old Clubfoot with her horns, but the bear killed her, too. Then the herd bull charged. He lifted Old Clubfoot onto his horns and hurled him into the scrub. With a roar of rage, the grizzly came out of the brush. He rose on his hind legs and met the mad bull head on as he charged again. Old Clubfoot wrenched the bull's head to the side. Then he broke the bull's spine with one crunch of his jaws.
