章节摘录

版权页： 插图： Few would give as much care and thought as Moonlight Tea House does to antique architecture. It extends to us the faith in reconstructing ancient buildings. The courtyard is delicately designed with typical Jiangnan appeal, including tile carvings, grilles, grey tiles, white walls and green bamboos with its shadows whirling in the light, and leisurely dotted by scattered porcelain tables and chairs. On the wall of the entrance, there are four tile carvings featuring "the Eight Immortals Crossing the Sea". The figures, clothes and expressions of the characters are all vivid. The architect structure of the hall is taken as a whole from an ancient building. Every piece of the stand columns, brackets, beams, even grey tiles and eaves tiles is moved from the original building and kept intact; the owner's care and effort is evident. The indoors is also designed with a scene of flowing water. Running through stone bridge and balustrade in the front of the hall, watering down our feeling of staying indoors. At one place of the balustrade, there is even a patio. The eaves surrounding the patio display to us a rare image of "Four Water Go Together" in the flows. By contrast, the buffet area is equipped with the most modern facilities, occasionally bringing our visual senses and thoughts to travel back and forth between the classic and the modern.
