章节摘录

The most common illness in the world is the cold. It often starts with a sore throat. You sneeze (打喷嚏) and your nose runs. You usually have a headache too. Often you have a cough after that. Its not a terrible illness, but you can feel very bad. There isnt a cure (治愈) for a cold, but you can take some medicines to make you feel better. For example, you can take some aspirin (阿斯匹林) to get rid of your headache. It is good to have a rest, and drink a lot of water too. A doctor once said, With the right medicine, a cold will last for several days. With no medicine, it will go on a whole week !

Where does our medicine come from ?

A long time ago, people understood that some plants made them feel better. They ate the leaves, the roots, the fruit, or the seeds of the plants. For example, the juice of lemons makes a sore throat feel better. In modern times, scientists have studied these plants, and found out which chemicals (化学物质) are in them. Many of our medicines today are made from those chemicals. There are some illnesses which we cannot cure yet. For example, nobody has found a cure for old age. But because of modern medicines, people now can live longer than before.
