章节摘录

Whether it is a tisy tee-hee-hee or a hearty ha-ha-ho , the sound of laughter has the same meaning all around the world. When we see someone laughing , we want to laugh , too. Even if we dont know the persons language , we want to join in his or her laughter. Even though we dont know why he or she is laughing , we laugh a little to ourselves. Laughter seems to , mean happiness. If we see little children laughing , our own hearts feel a little bit lighter. Sometimes the quickest way to make friends is to share a laugh at something. Trying to communicate in a foreign language for the first time sometimes causes laughter. A native speaker might laugh when we pronounce a word wrong or make a grammatical mistake , but this is not because we are foolish. A native speaker laughs because what we said sounded funny. When a wise person makes a mistake , he or she can laugh at himself or herself. Unless we can laugh at ourselves , we may seem foolish or boring to others. Why do we laugh ? What makes something funny ?

Is the following incident humorous to you ?

An American , a Frenchman , and an Englishwoman were in a taxi in Mexico City. The three tourists were admiring the buildings in the city when the American , who was very proud of the tall buildings in New York , boasted to his two friends , "Did you know that the Empire State Building was built in only two months ?"
