章节摘录

Lowering trade barriers is one of the most obvious means of encouraging trade. The barriers concerned include customs duties (or tariffs) and measures such as import bans or quotas that restrict quantities selectively. From time to time other issues such as red tape and exchange rate policies have also been discussed.

Since GATT's creation in 1947-48 there have been eight rounds of trade negotiations. A ninth round , under the Doha Development Agenda , is now underway. ~ At first these focused on lowering tariffs (customs duties) on imported goods. As a result of the negotiations , by the mid-1990s industrial countries' tariff rates on industrial goods had fallen steadily to less than 4%. But by the 1980s , the negotiations had expanded to cover non-tariff barriers on goods , and to the new areas such as services and intellectual property. Opening markets can be beneficial , but it also requires adjustment. The WTO agreements allow countries to introduce changes gradually , through "progressive liberalization". Developing countries are usually given longer time to fulfill their obligations. Predictability : through binding and transparency Sometimes , promising not to raise a trade barrier can be as important as lowering one , because the promise gives businesses a clearer view of their future opportunities. With stability and predictability , investment is encouraged , jobs are created and consumers can fully enjoy the benefits of competition — choice and lower prices. The multilateral trading system is an attempt by governments to make the business environment stable and predictable. In the WTO , when countries agree to open their markets for goods or services , they "bind" their commitments. For goods , these bindings amount to ceilings on customs tariff rates. Sometimes countries tax imports at rates that are lower than the bound rates. ~ Frequently this is the case in developing countries. In developed countries the rates actually charged and the bound rates tend to be the same.
