章节摘录

Mid-term and final Exam Guidelines The Midterm and Final Exams have been designed to monitor learner progress at key points through the course. The Mid-term Exam covers content found in the first six units of each student book. The Final Exam covers all twelve units. Structure and Format of the Exams In addition to assessing language structures, goals, and vocabulary, each Midterm and Final Exam also assesses learners' listening comprehension, reading comprehension, speaking, and writing skills. All components except the speaking assessment can be administered in a group setting. All components are in multiple choice format, except for the speaking and writing assessments. Answers to the multiple choice questions can be found in the answer keys. Each Midterm and Final Exam is arranged according to the following sections:

A. Sentence Completion Learners are required to select the correct word or words to complete a sentence. This type of question focuses on the learners' knowledge of the main grammatical structures featured in the corresponding units of the student book. There are ten questions in the Sentence Completion section.

B. Question Response Learners select the best response to a question or statement. These items assess how well learners have acquired key functional language. There are ten questions in the Question-Response section.

C. Vocabulary Students select the word or phrase that does not belong with the other three. This question type focuses on learners' knowledge of vocabulary introduced in the corresponding units of the student book. There are ten questions in the Vocabulary section.
