<<风声鹤唳>>

前言

One morning in 1905 , or the 3th year of the reign of Emperor Guangxu of Qing Dynasty , two brothers set out by boat from their hometown Boa-ah , a mountain hamlet in Fujian Province on the southern coast of China , for the port city of Xiamen , some sixty miles away. The boys were full of excitement and chatter , especially the younger one. Yutang was ten years old , and today , he was taking leave of his hometown and going with his brother to study in Xiamen. They were sons of Pastor Lin Zhicheng , who was born in the poor village of Wulisha. Pastor Lin was sending his sons to free missionary schools in Xiamen. The Pastor was not a follower of convention , so the boys did not wear queues. Yutang was a little guy , deeply tanned , with a prominent forehead , a pair of sparkling eyes , and a narrow chin. Six miles later , when the skiff came to Xiaoxi , the boys changed to a five-sail junk , and sailed toward Zhangzhou on West River. There were paddy fields and farmhouses on either side of the river , and tall mountains stood behind them , clad in grey-purplish hues. Yutang thought it inexpressibly beautiful. After a day's journey , the junk was tied up against the bank under some bamboo trees. Yutang was told to lie down , cover himself with a blanket and go to sleep. But sleep was the last thing on the boy's mind. The boatman sitting at the junk's stern was sucking at his pipe , and between gulps of bitter tea , telling stories about the Empress Dowager Cixi , who ruled the court today , having put the Emperor Guangxu under house arrest for supporting the reformers at the palace. Another junk was tied up on the opposite bank , brightly lit by lanterns. A soft breeze wafted sounds of merrymaking and music from a lute across the water. Oh , what a beautiful scene !

章节摘录

Miss Li banged the table with what seemed to be a drum stick used by the monks. "What is the matter?" she shouted. Now there was a complete stop. The men looked from Malin to their teacher, who pounded the table again and again. "Now begin again. Get the words right. If we have no food" "The enemy will supply us," roared the men. "If we have no guns" "The enemy will make them for us." "Now begin again."

This time they sang more lustily than ever. When the song was finished, Miss Li said in her coarse and rather masculine voice, "Before I dismiss you, I will ask you a few questions of what you learned today and yesterday. What are we fighting for?"

"Defending our country," the men shouted. "How old is our country?"

"Four thousand years." "What are we fighting against?"

There were shouts of "Japan" and "East-Ocean Devils." Miss Li seemed dissatisfied. One man squatting in front cried out, "Japanese imperialism!"

and received a nod from the teacher. "Yes, Japanese imperialism," she repeated. But there were murmurs among the class which showed that they had not quite understood. "What must we do when the enemy attack?"

"Retreat." "What must we do when the enemy retreat?"
