前言

My approach to work definitely isnt systematic. Rather : it is organised around a flow of ideas. Ill repeat that. “ Ideas and not concepts. ” Probably because I dont like the word “ concept. ” It seems pragmatic in a way : almost as if the strategy came before the feeling. Concept is a reductive term. It doesnt reveal the depth of feelings or their intensity. Ideas almost always come to you when you dont expect them. What interests me is simply creating the conditions required to make this alchemy possible. How does creation occur ?

It can come unexpectedly during a journey. While youre writing or painting. When you wake up in the middle of the night or in the morning before the sun rises Almost never when youre designing. Nothing can take the place of ideas : which come before the project : indifferent to our fears. The places come to us with our eyes half open. When you close your eyes you can walk through a space : observing how the light penetrates its areas : how people will move inside what will be a building. What Ive always been interested in are the flows : the landscapes created by the movement. The places of transitions. I have little interest in their form. I should agin emphasise : and I probably never tire of repeating it : that architture isnt a discipline : isnt a linear process : and that creation isnt.
