内容概要

Architecture has become exposed to a whole new form of International media with the introduction of the internet, and during the past decade architects have been able to display their work instantaneously to a worldwide audience, thereby receiving comments and enquiries within days. This has led to an internationalization of architecture and a far broader interest in the works and designs of architects around the globe than previously exposed and shown. This form of media has also given fantastic exposure to people who could never afford to purchase books and access information which is now readily and freely available.
