章节摘录

The conventional marketing mix can no longer be the prime consideration now that customers may be influenced by the social and environmental record and the degree of corporate responsibility, demonstrated by the company behind the product or brand. The public will be more interested in what a company actually does than in what it says and advertises. Ethical marketers should ideally embrace such principles as honesty and fairness where products are fit for purpose and accurately described; taking responsibility for their products and strategies; transparency encompassing openness, good communication and accountability; and respect in relation to consumer rights, their rights of redress and privacy. The American Marketing Association commits itself to promoting the highest standard of professional ethical norms and values for its members (practitioners, academics and students). Norms are established standards of conduct that are expected and maintained by society and / or professional organizations. Values represent the collective conception of what communities find desirable, important and morally proper.

Ethical Norms

- Do no harm. This means consciously avoiding harmful actions or omissions by embodying high ethical standards and adhering to all applicable laws and regulations in the choices we make.
- Foster trust in the marketing system. This means striving for good faith and fair dealing so as to contribute toward the efficacy of the exchange process as well as avoiding deception in product design, pricing, communication, and delivery of distribution.
