章节摘录

Questions 21-25     &quot;Youre off to the World Economic Forum ?

&quot; asked the Oxford economist, enviously. &quot;Howvery impressive. Theyve never invited me.&quot;

Three days later, I queued in the snow outside the conference center in Davos, standingbehind mink coats and cashmere overcoats, watched over by Swiss policemen with machineguns.&quot;Reporting press ?

You cant come in here. Side entrance, please.&quot; I stood in line again, thistime behind PMfa jackets and Newsweek journalists, waiting to collect my orange badge. Onceinside. I found that the seminar I wanted to go to was being held in a half-empty room. &quot;Youcant sit here. All seats are reserved for white badges. Coloured badges have to stand.&quot;

An acquaintance invited me to a dinner he was hosting. &quot;There are people Id like you tomeet.&quot; The green-badged Forum employee stopped me at the door. &quot;This is a participantsdinner. Orange badges are not allowed.&quot; Then, later, reluctantly. &quot;If youre coming in. pleasecan you turn your badge around ?

Dinners may be upset if they see youre a colour.&quot;     &quot;Why does anyone put up with being treated like this ?

&quot; I asked a Financial Timescorrespondent. &quot;Because we all live in hope of becoming white badges,&quot; he said. &quot;Then wellknow whats really going on.&quot;     A leading British businessman was wearing a white badge, but it bore a small logo on the topleft-hand corner. GLT. &quot;Whats a GLT ? &quot; I asked.     Ah, he said. &quot;well, its a Davos club. Im a Global Leader for Tomorrow.&quot;

&quot;That sounds very important,&quot; I said. &quot;Yes.&quot; He said, &quot;I thought so myself until I bumpedinto the man who had sponsored me. On the way to my first meeting. I asked him if he wascoming, and he said, &quot;Oh no, dear boy, I dont bother with that any longer. Im not a GLT anymore Im an IGWEL.&quot; &quot;Whats an IGWEL ?

&quot; I asked him. &quot;A member of Informal Group ofWorld Economic Leaders of Today.&quot;
