章节摘录

Bank Robbery There are lots of stories about Adela , but there is one which is most often told.

Shortly after the wall came down , a friend of Adela's approached her and said "Now we can do things which we have not been able to do for over 40 years. What should we do ?

" Adela barely paused and replied "We should rob a bank. " They went to the local bank in Cheb , a Czech border town , near Germany , where Adela grew up. They approached the teller and said , "We are from the student radio station (which was true) and we are here to test your security systems (which was not) -this is a robbery , give us all your money." The bank teller , who was not impressed with these teenage criminal wannabes , showed them out of the bank. Twenty minutes later , they returned with shirts pulled up over their faces , fingers under their shirts and said , "This time we are not fooling around , give us the money." This time the security guard was not fooling around and grabbed them both. After a brief discussion , they were deposited in the bank president's office. Adela is unusually charming. Within about 20 minutes , she had the bank president laughing about the situation. After 40 minutes the door to the bank president's office burst open and six police stormed in guns drawn. "We hear there is a robbery in progress , " said one of them breathlessly. "You are a bit late , " said the bank prez , who went on to tell them that they should attend other problems and that he had this one under control. The bank prez made a deal with Adela after he dispatched the police. He made her promise that she would retire from bank robbery and not go to the press with the fact that the police took the better part of an hour to respond to a robbery.
