<<设计生活模式 香港高楼社区>>

内容概要

How do citizens in one of ‘ the most livable cities in the world ’ actually live? Almost 50% of Hong Kong ‘ s population, some 3.5 million people live in public housing. They occupy the high density, high-rise tower blocks, in small apartments that have been standardised, serialised, repeated and refined for efficiency in construction. Patterns of Living, a publication that captures essence of a research project investigating Hong Kong ‘ s high rise communities, takes you inside some of their homes capturing a glimpse of their lives through a series of drawings and snapshots of typical interiors.
